Movie Magic In the beginning of the film, one of the children, Max, holds a dead mouse by the tail and walks around the playground with it, then throws it into a trashcan. The dead mouse was a prop. In another scene, Phil hits a beehive on the porch, bees come flying out of it and he sprays it with the hose. The beehive was made by production and a computer generated the bees. Show and Tell A very cute scene in this film was when the kids bring their pets into Daddy Day Care for show and tell. We see different kids sitting on chairs holding various animals. There is a large bunny, a tortoise, a parrot, a St. Bernard, and then a tarantula that crawls on Phil's head. The trainers familiarized the children with the animals before filming began. All of the animals were comfortable being handled and comfortable in the scene. The big St. Bernard loved hugs from the kids. At the end of this scene, the dog is shown lying on the couch by the kids. It was hard for the trainer to retrieve him afterwards! All of the kids sat on a couch and watched as one child sat on a chair, holding an animal and talking about it. The child sat on a chair and a trainer handed the animal to the child or placed it next to the child. The trainers stood just off camera and retrieved the animals after the scene was over. When the child had the spider, it was a fake one. The tarantula that crawled on Phil's head was real, but the actor's head was not. A Styrofoam head was made and put on a special stand that duplicated the real actor's head movements. The real tarantula was put on the fake head by a trainer. This was filmed in front of a green screen and edited into the film during post production. Petting Zoo And Pony Rides The fundraiser to get Daddy Day Care up and running features a carnival with a petting zoo. There are several different animals, including ducks, llamas, goats and sheep in a corral and a pony ride off to the side. One of the children, Jennie, opens the corral and the animals begin to exit roaming all over the grounds. There are food booths set up with various foods displayed on tables and the mischievous Jennie manages to pour some roaches on bowls of beans and potato salad. We see some goats on top of a table eating pies and watch Phil being chased by a couple of llamas and sheep. Ducks and chickens are seen in the background. For the scene, a small corralled area was set up and the animals were placed inside by the trainers. The animals belong to a petting zoo and are familiar with the corral as well as people entering and petting them. The kids and the extras playing their parents were all introduced to the animals before hand. Trainers doubled as actors during this scene and at least one was in the corral at all times. Trainers set up a puppy pen with buckets of grain about twenty feet from the corral and a trainer stood off camera near the gate when the actress opened it. The younger animals exited the corral first, followed by the older ones. The animals were never actually loose as six trainers stood off camera as well as a Border Collie named Jesse. Jesse was there to help herd any animals that might decide to wander. None of them did - they all ran into the puppy pen to receive their grain reward. The actress playing Jennie had a cookie tin full of fake roaches that she dumped onto the potato salad and baked beans. Then in a separate shot, a trainer released 15 live roaches from a hole behind the tent into the potato salad and beans and they crawled around nibbling on the food. The roaches were removed from the food by the wranglers who stood off camera in case any began to scatter. Two goats were placed on top of a table and held by trainers until the camera began to roll. The pies were set down and the trainers released the collars of the goats and the goats and ducked down under the table. The goats began to nibble on the pies and were retrieved by the trainers afterwards. Six ponies were connected to the pony sweep and were experienced with the ride. The kids who sat on the ponies had lots of practice so they were comfortable and each pony was equipped with a seatbelt for the child. 2003 5.13(371 votes) Puntúa esta película Datos streaming Dos ejecutivos de una empresa publicitaria, Charlie y Phil, son despedidos después de que su última campaña no diera los resultados apetecidos. Written by Geoff Rodkey and directed by Steve Carr, it marks Murphy and Carr's second collaboration after Dr. Dolittle 2 (2001). The plot follows two fathers who start a child day care out of their home after they are laid off from their corporate jobs. The film was released in the United States on May 9, 2003, by Columbia Pictures. It received generally negative reviews from critics, and grossed $164 million worldwide on a budget of $60 million dollars. Plot[] Charles "Charlie" Hinton is a health food product marketing executive, and his wife Kimberly "Kim" has just gone back to work as a lawyer. They enroll their son Benjamin "Ben", in Chapman Academy, an expensive and over academic preschool headed by a haughty woman named Miss Gwyneth Harridan. However, on Ben's first day at Chapman, Charlie and his best friend, Phillip "Phil" Ryerson, along with three hundred other people, lose their jobs when their boss, CEO Jim Fields, shuts down the company's entire health division due to children disliking healthy breakfast cereal made from vegetables. After six weeks' worth of failed attempts to find a new job, Charlie is forced to pull Ben out of Chapman as it is now too expensive and, after a day's worth of failed attempts to find a more affordable alternative, he eventually decides to open his very own daycare center in his home with the help of Phil, calling it "Daddy Day Care". At first, the local parents are suspicious of men wanting to work with kids, but as Daddy Day Care is cheaper and more child based than Chapman, the latter begins to lose students. Daddy Day Care opens and Charlie and Phil each begin taking care of several kids, though things do not go smoothly at first due to the kids having several issues and being prone to causing chaos around the house. Fearing Daddy Day Care will ruin Chapman, Miss Harridan attempts to shut down Daddy Day Care by notifying child services that Charlie and Phil are not following the relevant regulations. Mr. Dan Kubitz, a director of child services, notifies them of the codes that they need to fix, which Charlie and Phil quickly correct. Mr. Kubitz then informs Phil and Charlie that they need another employee to keep an appropriate ratio of children to care providers. Fortunately, Marvin, a nerdy former co worker, visits and after seeing how good he is at entertaining the children, Phil and Charlie ask him about joining. Marvin is initially unsure but then finds himself falling for Kelli, the single mother of one of the kids in the daycare, Dylan, and agrees. Daddy Day Care becomes more popular and attracts more children and parents, much to Miss Harridan's dismay. Charlie, Phil, and Marvin each begin enjoying running Daddy Day Care and taking care of the kids while bonding with them and helping them overcome their issues. When Miss Harridan starts to lose her patience with Daddy Day Care, she notifies child services again. Mr. Kubitz tells Charlie and Phil that they are beyond the regulated capacity of children for a daycare center in a family home, and in order for Daddy Day Care to legally continue operation, they must kick at least two kids out, or move to a permanent facility elsewhere in the city. Charlie is too reluctant to kick any kids out and decides to instead simply move Daddy Day Care to a bigger space. Marvin tells Charlie and Phil about an available building with potting, but they don't have enough money to buy it. They hold a fund-raising children's festival called "Rock for Daddy Day Care", which Miss Harridan finds out about. No longer able to compete fairly, she, along with her hesitant assistant Jennifer "Jenny Nealon", infiltrates the festival and sabotages everything by deflating the bouncy castle, releasing the animals from the petting zoo, replacing the face paint with glue, putting cockroaches in the food, and bribing the groundskeeper into turning on the park sprinklers. As a result, Daddy Day Care does not make any progress in funding. The next day, Jim calls Charlie and offers him and Phil their old jobs back for double their old salaries, letting them run the whole health division, and Charlie accepts Miss Harridan's offer to take the kids back to Chapman for exactly the price of Daddy Day Care if Charlie and Phil decide to close Daddy Day Care. Marvin, heartbroken by the closing of the daycare, declines Charlie and Phil's offer to be aboard their marketing panel and decides to sell his things. Back at the advertising agency, Charlie and Phil's first assignment is to market a sugary, cotton candy flavored breakfast cereal to children. While listening to a cereal pitch, Charlie realizes the impact Daddy Day Care has had on Ben and the other children and starts to question the morality of his assignment. He quits his job and convinces Phil to quit with him. He and Phil pick up Marvin after convincing him not to sell his things, before heading off to Chapman. Once there, Charlie interrupts a student orientation and confronts Miss Harridan, claiming she does not care what children want and that Chapman's child development methods are too extreme. Listing examples of how he has helped the children improve, such as potty-training Maxwell "Max" Ryerson, teaching Becca how to read, and Crispin how to be polite to others, as well as helping Ben make new friends, Charlie successfully convinces the children's parents to bring their children back to Daddy Day Care, making it a raging success and earning it the new facility, forcing Chapman out of business. Six months later, Marvin begins a relationship with Kelli, Miss Harridan is now a crossing guard, and Jenny takes a new job at Daddy Day Care (which makes Miss Harridan feel betrayed). The film ends as Miss Harridan is ambushed by a swarm of bees (due to a flower on her vest that Crispin gave her), and tries to shoo them away by waving her stop sign at them, accidentally causing a traffic jam around her in the process. Cast[] Steven Anthony Lawrence as Stupid Edward Keeser Cheap Trick appear as themselves at the Rock for Daddy Day Care charity event. Production[] In April 2002, The Hollywood Reporter reported Eddie Murphy was to reteam with Steve Carr, who directed Dr. Dolittle 2, on Daddy Day Care. In June 2002, Anjelica Huston was in negotiations to join the cast. The following month, Revolution Studios set Jeff Garlin, as well as Steve Zahn, to join Murphy in the film. Shooting began on August 1, 2002 in Los Angeles, California. Production was started on August 5, 2002, and wrapped on November 22, 2002. In December 2002, the film's poster was officially released, with the tagline, D-Day is coming. Release[] Critical reception[] On Rotten Tomatoes, the film has an approval rating of 27% based on 131 reviews, with an average rating of 4.5/10. The website's critical consensus reads, "Daddy Day Care does its job of babysitting the tots. Anyone older will probably be bored." On Metacritic, the film has a weighted average score of 39 out of 100, based on 31 critics, indicating "generally unfavorable reviews." Audiences polled by CinemaScore gave the film an average grade of "A-" on an A+ to F scale. Todd McCarthy from Variety called it "Scarcely more amusing than spending ninety minutes in a pre K classroom" and a "comically undernourished junk food snack". Box office[] Despite the negative critical ratings, the film was a box office success, grossing over $160 million worldwide based on a $60 million budget. The film was released in the United Kingdom on July 11, 2003, and opened at #3, behind Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle and Bruce Almighty. The next two weekends, the film moved down one place, before finally ending up at #10 on August 1. Sequels[] Main article: Daddy Day Camp In August 2003, soon after the release of Daddy Day Care, Murphy was rumoured to be involved in a sequel film, although he had not signed up for one. A sequel was released on August 8, 2007, titled Daddy Day Camp, with Cuba Gooding, Jr. replacing Murphy as Charlie Hinton. The film was panned by critics, with a 1% rating on Rotten Tomatoes. It won the Razzie Award for "Worst Prequel or Sequel". Another sequel was released direct to video in February 2019, unrelated to the first two entries. Titled Grand Daddy Day Care, it starred Reno Wilson (a well known Murphy impersonator) and Danny Trejo. The plot takes a different twist on the original, as it focuses on a man (Wilson) who decides to open a senior citizen home to raise funds. Unlike the first two films, Grand Daddy Day Care is adult oriented to a degree, as it contains drug references and occasional profanity. s centrar la barra de búsqueda p abrir menú de perfil esc cierra una ventana abierta 7 abrir la ventana de atajos del teclado b retrocede (o a padre cuando sea aplicable) e ir a la página de edición ← (flecha derecha) ir a la temporada siguiente → (flecha izquierda) ir a la temporada anterior → (flecha derecha) ir al episodio siguiente ← (flecha izquierda) ir al episodio anterior a abrir la ventana de añadir imagen t abrir la sección de traducción ctrl+ s enviar formulario n crear nuevo debate w cambiar el estado de visualización p cambiar público/privado c cambiar cerrar/abrir a abrir actividad r responder al debate l ir a la última respuesta ctrl+ enter enviar tu mensaje → (flecha derecha) página siguiente ← (flecha izquierda) página anterior Configuraciones Habilitar atajos de teclado Comedia 2003 1 h 32 min 27% 8+ PG Reparto Eddie Murphy, Jeff Garlin, Steve Zahn Dirección Steve Carr Berenson was born on April 6,1968 in Los Angeles, but grew up in Bethesda, MD.
