to INSEE. The dataset is centralized and controlled by the INSEE through the dissemination of the complete database. The number of minutes entered in each bulletin makes it possible to check the completeness of marriages, since 2012, municipalities with 10,000 inhabitants or more, where the INSEE observes a significant decrease in the number of marriages compared to the previous year, are contacted to verify that all the events have been transmitted correctly. In addition, in order to judge the completeness of marriages, deaths and births, INSEE has carried out since 2001 specific surveys near municipalities: the "Completeness" surveys According to these surveys, the quality of information on births and deaths seems to have improved significantly. On the other hand, legislation on marriages remains inadequate, especially in rural communes. Therefore, the civil registration data on marriages were completed from 1999. Between 2002 and 2010, one fifth of French municipalities were surveyed each year, with the exception of those municipalities which have a computerized system for transmitting civil registration data to the public authorities, and those included in the scope of the "Cities" survey. (Survey carried out up to 2010 by the INSEE about a Of the municipalities in the monthly number of civil declarations recorded in the municipality). We seek to have a good representation of the whole of MÃ@ropole by balancing each year the municipalities selected between the departments and their average number of registered. The selected sample is "rotate": the municipalities investigated once the following are the following. However, there is one exception: in its small number of municipalities, overseas departments are covered comprehensively each year. In 2011, the "completeness" research did not produce, the results of the "completeness 2010" research (for the 2009 marriage) and the 2009 city research (for the 2009 weddings) were used to repair the marriages registered in 2010. The monthly research "Cities", with the municipalities were eliminated in 2010 due to the improvement of the speed of the municipalities to the civil statistics. The recovery of the number of marriages is, therefore, increasingly based on the survey of "completeness." The last one was carried out in May 2014 to repair the 2013 data: it is carried out by telephone and only the non-computerized municipalities were investigated because the computerization of the exchanges with INSEE allows a priori a better control of the completeness. 3,007 municipalities have been questioned.
