How can I play internet radio from Foobar via USB output into my DAC? I am specifically interested in Live365 stations. I tried adding the URL location but it did not work. For Last.fm I understand there's a plugin available. Any advice? however a browse/list by genres should be there rather than entering individual radios. Thanks for the links. However, none of these have worked when I try playing Live365 Hi Soulfulgred - have you solved the internet radio issue? I just put in a .pls radio station location (under add location) that is supposed to stream without a plug in but nothing appears in my playlist. I wonder if there is an option to search for? Or does one need to select .pls somewhere in the options? however a browse/list by genres should be there rather than entering individual radios. However a browse/list by genres should be there rather than entering individual radios. Where would I look for this please? I am trying to add Radio 3 from BBC which is a high quality stream. Thanks. Hi Staxxx...I tried very hard to get Live365 on Foobar but gave up. I have since then moved to a SB Touch that has an app for this station. Works great... Interesting...I would love to find a good internet radio with 5/PDF out. I hear there is a reasonable one by Grace Audio, but it's only available in the US. nowadays an android device with a USB dac/Dock should be cheaper alternative to a dedicated radio streamer? This is the default welcome page used to test the correct operation of the Apache2 server after installation on Debian systems. If you can read this page, it means that the Apache HTTP server installed at this site is working properly. You should replace this file (located at /var/www/html/index.html) before continuing to operate your HTTP server. If you are a normal user of this web site and don't know what this page is about, this probably means that the site is currently unavailable due to maintenance. If the problem persists, please contact the site's administrator. Debian's Apache2 default configuration is different from the upstream default configuration, and split into several files optimized for interaction with Debian tools. The configuration system is fully documented in /usr/share/doc/apache2/README.Debian.gz. Refer to this for the full documentation. Documentation for the web server itself can be found by accessing the manual if the apache2-doc package was installed on this server. The configuration layout for an Apache2 web server installation on Debian systems is as follows: /etc/apache2/[- apache2.conf] [- ports.conf]- mods-enabled[- -.load] [- -.conf]- conf-enabled[- -.conf]- sites-enabled[- -.conf apache2.conf is the main configuration file. It puts the pieces together by including all remaining configuration files when starting up the web server. ports.conf is always included from the main configuration file. It is used to determine the listening ports for incoming connections, and this file can be customized anytime. Configuration files in the mods-enabled/, conf-enabled/ and sites-enabled/ directories contain particular configuration snippets which manage modules, global configuration fragments, or virtual host configurations, respectively. They are activated by symlinking available configuration files from their respective *-available/ counterparts. These should be managed by using our helpers a2enmod, a2ismod, a2ensite, a2disite, and a2enconf, a2disconf . See their respective man pages for detailed information. The binary is called apache2. Due to the use of environment variables, in the default configuration, apache2 needs to be started/stopped with /etc/init.d/apache2 or apache2ctl. Calling /usr/bin/apache2 directly will not work with the default configuration. By default, Debian does not allow access through the web browser to any file apart of those located in /var/www, public_html directories (when enabled) and /usr/share (for web applications). If your site is using a web document root located elsewhere (such as in /srv) you may need to whitelist your document root directory in /etc/apache2/apache2.conf. The default Debian document root is /var/www/html. You can make your own virtual hosts under /var/www. This is different to previous releases which provides better security out of the box. Please use the reporting tool to report bugs in the Apache2 package with Debian tools. However, check existing bug reports before reporting a new bug. Please report bugs specific to modules (such as PHP and others) to respective packages, not to the web server itself. It supports a lot of different tags, including artist, albums, date, track number/total tracks, and more. It supports MusicBrainz-specific tags: Artist ID, Album ID, Release Group ID, Disc ID, Track ID, album type, album status. Missing TOCs can be submitted to MusicBrainz from the context menu. 4. FAQ Why is seeking so slow while playing MP3 files?The MP3 format does not support sample-accurate seeking, and sample-accurate seeking is required by other features of Foobar2000.CUE playback. Furthermore, MP3 seeking can not be optimized either for CBR files because frame size is not constant since of padding used, or for VBR files. Therefore, MP3 seeking works by brute force-walking the MPEG stream chain and is appropriately slow. However, this will get faster when you pass through the same point of file for the second time since seek tables have been built in the RAM. Why are some of my files not seen by the Media Library?If your files are not in one of the formats natively supported by Foobar2000, in particular like Monkey's Audio, you need to download and install the compatible decoder component so that it will be able to see and play them. Furthermore, if you have already installed it, you need to remove affected folders from the Media Library configuration and add them back for those files so you can see them. How do I edit tags of my files?To do that, just right-click one or more tracks and then choose Properties from the context menu. Moreover, numerous additional functionality can be accessed by selecting one or more fields in the Properties dialog and then right-clicking them. 5.
