Photo Courtesy: Cardi B/YouTube Claiming the coveted title of “Summer Song” means entering the history of music for representing the state of American culture at its peak or for simply moving the dance floor to become synonymous with fun under the sun. Hits like “Macarena” by Los del R, “Genie in a Bottle” by Christina Aguilera and “Old Town Road” by Lil Nas X are just some of those classics that have reached similar heights and become total memories of the summer. And 2020’s favorite songs will appear on the countless playlists of the future, when we start to associate them with this too interesting time period. This year, the state of the world (and our ability to enjoy most summer activities) is dramatically different. Since the coronavirus pandemic shows few signs of slowing down, this is not the time to relax on the beach or do a nightly relaxation session with friends. Fortunately, this hasn’t stopped the artists from making sure the summer stays sparkling, at least for our ears, with amazing music. Which of these hits will get first place on your “Song of the Summer” playlist? Megan Thee Stallion knows a few things about creating a big summer hit. Last year she unleashed “Hot Girl Summer”, an incredibly danceable track featuring Nicki Minaj and Ty Dolla Sign. The title of the song even took root in pop culture when many people proclaimed their intention to have a “warm summer for girls.” (Also, who can forget Blackbear’s response, “Hot Girl Bummer”? You know you’re doing something right when other artists all become referents.) Photo Courtesy: @theestallion/Twitter While her sequel “Savage” was successful thanks to TikTok dances, her remix with Beyonce became Megan Thee Stallion’s biggest hit. “Savage” has become so popular that both artists have received their days in their hometown of Houston, Texas, and the couple are donating the proceeds of the song to a Houston area non-profit association. At this rate, Megan Thee Stallion could consider herself the queen of the summer. Houston’s Khruangbin trio know something about the merger, and the summer of 2020 owes them a bit of gratitude. Their name comes from a Thai word which means “flying engine”, or an airplane, and this is quite a hint that their songs will transport you to a distant and warm place. With nuances of psychedelia, surf rock and soul jazz, this beat sounds and feels like you’re crawling on a tropical beach bar as the sun sets behind the palm trees. Photo Courtesy: vpro vrije geluiden/YouTube While “C-Side” was released in January, the song finally found its place during the summer days, and it’s easy to see why it’s not a melody. With the help of the singer Soul Leon Bridges, the sultry landscape of the song will make you feel like you were on a mystical and funky island. If you can’t get on a flying engine and head to a summer place, you jump on this track. Bad Bunny has become one of them The most dominant reggaeton artists in recent years, and the Caribbean roots of musical style channel the last atmosphere when it comes to all summer things. Just try to sit down, pop on this track and don’t think of warm colors, warm waters and sparkling sun. Photo courtesy: Bad Bunny / YouTube appearing on the Sophomore Studio Album of Bad Bunny’s Sophomore Studio Album Yhlqmdlg, “Yo Perreo Sola” is a shoutout for those who do not like to dance alone. With the current state of things, many of us are going to do this – and this track encourages us to do it without shame. This is Bad Bunny’s 12th song to land on the Hot 100 Billboard chart, and it is also his most inventive music video to date. We definitely need that kind of entertainment this summer. Singer-Songwriter Fiona Apple has become a critical treasure in the 1990s with its “criminal” and “fast as you can”. Since 1996, Apple has unveiled music at a sporadic and unpredictable pace. Her 2020 Studio Album Fetch the Bolt Cutters is her first album in eight years, and critics agree, it is still her best collection. Complimentary photo: Fiona Apple performs with the Watkins family band at the Lincoln Center outside Americafest NYC doors in Damrosch Park Bandshell, New York, New York, 8 August 2015. Photo by Jack Vartoogian / Getty Images Fetch the Bolt Cutters has helped Countless listeners make sense of the shelter orders on the spot, but “under the table” stands out among the rest. Inspired by a real dinner from where Apple refused to keep the voice down, the song is a perfect fit for a year when people refuse to shut up and instead opt to call offenders, both online and in the streets. Greeting from Queens, New York, Tall Juan turned his head all over the world. Originally from Argentina, the artist attributes its sound to the influence of various others, including Bob Marley and Ramones - the type of peppy tracks of the old brilliant and energetic school as the summer sun. And Tall Juan’s music offers the perfect time capsule to remind us of those favorite classics. courtesy photo: Talljuan.bandcamp.com/ Its latest offer, Atlantico, is an album of eight songs full of pure summertime rock which is beautifully updated with a three-year and tropical touch. “Los Chicos” is one of the most harmonious, nostalgic and captivating songs from all traces and brought you back to summers of myself when the times were simpler thanks to its non-complicable but uterine glitter. Hip-Hop Superpair Run the Jewels is best known for delivering harsh truths, not summer frivolity. With four albums to their name, Killa Mike and EL-P found success focusing on social and political issues without the need for flash or love music videos from charts ofAnd this is particularly relevant from this year’s protests and calls increased for justice following the murder of George Floyd. Photo of courtesy: Killer Mike and EL-P to manage jewels performing during the East All Points festival at Victoria Park Park May 31, 2019, in London, England. Photo of Robin Little / Redferns included in the fourth album of the couple RTJ4,  «Ju $ T» is a simple, provocative and perfectly representative piece of this summer. The song points to the spotlight on slave holders that are still placed on dollar bills with an attractive rhythm courtesy of Pharrell Williams. And a song of this political power would not be right without his collaborator and activist Zack de la Rocha. With racist statues that are overturned across the country and the appeals for parity of rights echo through the streets, this song could not have arrived at a better time. With his sunny and uplifting Ritmo Reggae, this piece taken from his homonymous album could be the most saturated song of Theophilus London. The texts of  «Bebey» meet by the sea, bask in the light breeze, run away to Rio and relax with a glass of wine, and  i Easy to imagine pedaling by bicycle on the waterfront while this piece plays in the background. Photo Courtesy: My Bebey Records / YouTube  «Cuba», a piece that appears in the same album, is another great contender for the summer track of this year. It is a little more jazz, a little dancer, and decidedly more earthy, but equally evocative when it comes to to awaken the sensations of heat. Imagine this couple like the perfect duo for a perfect summer day, with  «Bebey» that plays when the sun is out and  «Cuba» that sneaks out of your speakers at the moon rising. The Argentine Argentine Progressive Producer and the Spanish singer Rosala can come from different environments, but they focused on global radio waves with their digital duet. This type of spark is exactly what we need to inject contagiously fun energy in a summer that is not necessarily everything we dreamed of. Photo Courtesy: @ RollingStone / Twitter Dance music has always dominated the waves during the summer, but this song offers something different. Next to the entertaining reggaeton rhythms, Arca amplifies things with some sub-low dynamic and electronic explosions to match the flamenco trilli of Rosala . You will keep you in a digital trance every time you tune out on «which, let’s say the truth, it will certainly happen more than once. , a captivating choir and texts that resound with a massive push for civil rights underway in the United States? You will get a worthy competitor for the largest summer success of the 2020. Dababy and Roddy Ricch, two relatively unknown rappers only a year ago, they created with «Rockstar» a masterpiece that everyone cannot stop listening. Photo Courtesy: David Crotty / Patrick McMullan / Getty Images The song has reached the peaks of the Billboard of the summer and shows no signs of decline, of course, but the text itself could be what helped consolidate the place of this song in the national consciousness. Words of DaBaby DaBabyThe sober realities of systemic racism and police brutality, which represent social and political issues that we always associate with this unique moment in American history. Can’t you get enough “Rockstar”? There is also a Black Lives Matter remix that makes an even more powerful statement. Our summer queen Thee Stallion returns, this time the colorful and inimitable Cardi B rests. None of these rappers is known for having beaten around the bush - with Cardi’s texts always matching the intensity of his undisputed public person - and this trace in the face is nothing different. And it’s also something to have fun. Photo Courtesy: Cardi B/YouTube “WAP” received a broad critical praise for its sexual-positive texts and for its celebration of female empowerment, and we could all use this type of booty-shaking hop to close one of the most soberingly strange summers on the disk. In addition, with a dance accompanying from the music video that you are making way through the social media circuit like wild fire, “WAP” has all the ingredients to make a song that is almost too hot to handle. This is a real sizzler, and it seems that it will keep our hot summer for weeks to come. Come on.
