You can reduce window installation costs by facing the installation of window glass by yourself instead of hiring a contractor to do the job. There are a few steps involved in installing a window, starting with removing the old window, and then preparing the jamb before installing and finishing the new one. Remove the old WindowPry window and the window outside the old window. With these pieces off the road, remove the screws holding the jamb window, and then lift the old window carefully to prevent it from breaking while you put it aside. If there are more bands, it may be easier to remove them one at a time, depending on the DIY network. Check the opening carefully, look for rotten areas inside the jamb and outside the window. Anything that is in bad condition must be replaced to avoid having to do a repeat window installation job in the near future. Measure to make sure the new window fits properly to the opening. The approximate opening should be between 1/4-inch and 3/8-inch larger than the outer edge of the new window, according to the DIY grid. Install the WindowSlide the new window in the opening to make sure it fits properly. It should be snug, but not so tight, ~ Hard to move. This is called dry mounting or window fit test. If the window is not sitting properly in the jamb, use shims to tie, according to Home Depot. When you're satisfied with the shape, apply silicone caulking around the outside edge of the new window. Slide it back into place, make sure the beams are seated properly, and then use the screws that came with the window to attach it to the shaft. Fill the gaps and the Trim Receiving WindowIf there are gaps around the window, push in open spaces, or use caulk to seal the holes. Expansion of the foam spray can also work for larger cracks, according to the DIY network. If there is a difference between the new window and the carton, add a jamb extension to fill. Use finished nails to reattach the trim, or use new finishes if you prefer. Apply ToucheesFor finished the last part of the window well installation project, cover the nail holes in the window frame with wood putty, as suggested by the DIY network. Make sure the putty is smooth, and then let it dry. If then you can use fine sandpaper to smooth it, and then paint over to finish the surface.
