Tie a party in with something you're learning in class or use it to reward students for powering through their standardized tests. Parties are more than just plain fun. Classroom parties build relationships and social skills among your students, help them work toward a common goal, and bring positivity into your school. Surprisingly, parties can boost academic achievement, as well. Doing something fun at school releases feel-good chemicals in the brain, which can make learning more enjoyable for students long after the snacks are eaten and the balloons are thrown away. Here are some epic party ideas to get you started. Just so you know, we may get a small share of the sales made through the Amazon affiliate links on this page. Via @everydaywithmsk Turn off the classroom lights and have some fun with glow in the dark! In addition to fun, you can bring in some academics by practicing sight words made with glow sticks or use glow in the dark beads as math manipulatives. Have the kids wear white t-shirts, add some black light bulbs and music for even more fun. Grab some glow-in-the-dark balloons and glow sticks and get this party started. Via @trialesofateacher But not just any pizza party! Your students can enjoy a pizza lunch while also practicing restaurant skills. They can practice reading a menu, making a pizza topping choice, and ordering their meal. Bring in a little math by giving the students a budget and having them order a meal within that limit. Decorate the desks with red-checked tablecloths and use pizza-themed tableware to make it extra authentic. Via @karyn_bigelow This can be a quick 5-minute party idea that doubles as a brain break or a longer party that includes snacks and song requests. However you decide to have this party, you'll need a disco light and a dance party button! Via @happycamperclassroom Lets face it: kids live for pajama day! Turn the day into a party with a PJ party in a bag activity. Fill the bags with snacks, add a book, and you're ready for an afternoon of lounging in the classroom. Dont forget your pajamas! Via @happycamperclassroom This is a quick and easy party just pop a bunch of popcorn (for age-appropriate kids, of course!) and provide some toppings, such as butter, salt, sprinkles, candies, crushed-up cookies, and powered flavorings. Serve the popcorn in authentic boxes and put on a movie for an epic party. Via @sciencewithsuzie Give your students safety glasses and lab coats and conduct several hands-on science experiments. Mix vinegar with water for a bubbling concoction or make elephant toothpaste with yeast, hydrogen peroxide, and soap. Whatever experiment you include, this party is sure to be a blast. Via @traenychisolartclass Get all the random craft supplies you have and let the kids have at it. They can create anything they can dream up. Extend the fun by having an art show. Invite other classes and parents to come view the masterpieces. Via @happycamperclassroom Celebrate the start of fall or all the things your students are thankful for with a DIY caramel apple bar. Apples and premade caramel are a must, but let kids customize their apple with mini chocolate chips, sprinkles, and whipped cream. Tip: Slice the apples ahead of time to make it easier for your students to eat them. Send leftovers home in these cute apple-shaped containers. You can also change this party up by having a frozen yogurt bar instead. Via @sassy2nd Make bubble wands, blow bubbles, and chew bubble gum at this epic party. Have a bubble-blowing challenge with gum or see who can blow the most bubbles with one breath. Via @sassy2nd This is a classic party idea for classrooms across the country, but for a good reason. Kids love the chance to watch a just for fun movie at school. Prepare a rolling cart full of delicious movie snacks and let the show begin. Via @sassy2nd This is a great theme for the New Year or the end of the school year. Collect as many items that make a sound, head outside, and make a bang! Balloons, slapping sticky hands, and popcorn are some inexpensive things to get you started. This party is also an educational way to learn more about the science behind sound. Via @little_artist_party This is a great opportunity for your students to get messy. Provide premade slime and a huge supply of things for students to mix into their slime to customize their mess. Novelty erasers, googly eyes, beads, and glitter are some easy mix-ins. Via @litttle_artist_party Set up a few canvases, fill palettes with washable paint, and encourage your little artists to create something beautiful. This is a great way for art teachers to end the school year. Parties are the perfect way to celebrate big wins in the classroom. With a little prep and few supplies, your students will make priceless memories of their time with you as their teacher. Every parent and teacher knows the feeling watching a child struggle to make friends, yearning to connect with their peers, but sometimes not quite knowing how. Heres the deal: For some kids, making friends can be like navigating a huge forest with towering trees a tad daunting. It might feel scary or confusing, like theyre lost in the woods without a map. They might need help figuring out where to go or what to do. But fear not! Just as there are ways to find your way out of a dense forest, there are ways to learn friendship skills and thrive in social situations. So, lets dive right in and explore some fantastic friendship activities and ideas to help your child or students make healthy friendships. Ralph Waldo Emerson once said: The only way to have a friend is to be one.Understanding what makes a goodfriend is actually one of those very important life skills that we must all learn. Lets face it: Discovering a truly terrific friend isnt always a piece of cake. We all want good friends, so its only fair that we strive to be good friends to others. Ive said it before, and Ill say it again: Building relationships is one of theMOST important skillsthat we can learn! Meeting new friends should be an enjoyable experience. But we get it, different social situations can feel overwhelming for some kids. When young children have strong social skills, it can make building close friendships much easier. But strong social skills just dont come naturally for everyone. Thats why we sometimes need to help and guide our young learners on the art of making friends. One effective way to foster friendships is through engaging friendship activities.Activities help kids connect and bond, much like sharing a fun adventure. These experiences provide a common ground for children to interact, learn, and grow. If you are a parent, teacher, or even counselor who needs some help teaching kids how to be a good friend and make friends with others, weve got the perfect friendship activities for you! Lets get started on this jumbo list of friendship-building activities: Crafting colorful Friendship bracelets is a hands-on way for kids to explore the bonds of friendship. As they weave the threads together, discuss qualities that make friendships strong. Crafting paper or fabric flowers allows kids to express the qualities of good friends on each petal. Or, like our friendship flower craft below, kids can glue a special message onto their flowers and give it to someone special. This creative friendship craft reinforces kindness, trust, and more. See our relationships unit in action (with our friendship flowers!) Dive into a heartwarming social story that emphasizes essential friendship values. Its a great conversation starter for discussing what makes a good friend. Our social story, found in the Friendship Kit, is called the Friendship Formula. It takes you on a journey through various everyday situations that kids might face at school, offering practical solutions. Kids can totally relate because they step into these scenarios, helping them learn how to handle similar situations when they come their way. Get artistic and design a poster showcasing what it means to be a good friend. This visual reminder helps kids recognize and practice friendship qualities. Building a collage from magazine clippings reinforces qualities like empathy, sharing, and cooperation. Its a fun way to explore what makes a great friend. Play a lively game of Bingo using qualities such as kind, helpful, and trustworthy. Its an enjoyable way to reinforce positive friendship traits. Act out scenes that exemplify friendship qualities and have fun guessing which traits are being demonstrated. This game enhances understanding of friendship traits. Host a special awards event where kids recognize each others acts of friendship with certificates or ribbons. Celebrating kindness and generosity! Read captivating books about friendship and explore the actions of the characters that embody good friend qualities. It is great for circle time and great for sparking meaningful discussions. (Below is a list of our favorite friendship picture books!) Encourage kids to craft and recite their own friendship pledges, promising to be caring, supportive, and compassionate friends. Get this coloring pledge on our Friendship Kit Inspire daily journaling about acts of kindness and friendship experiences. It fosters reflection and reinforces positive behaviors. Let creativity shine as kids perform short plays or skits showcasing positive friendship behaviors. Its fun to act out what it means to be a good friend. Gather in a circle and exchange genuine compliments, reinforcing positive interactions and nurturing self-esteem. Decorate smooth stones with friendship qualities, then exchange them as tokens of friendship and reminders what makes a good friend. Why not grab this free Kindness Rocks Activity Kit here? Create compliment collages. Provide magazines, scissors, glue, and large sheets of paper. Encourage kids to find words or images that represent compliments or positive qualities and paste them on the collage. Share and discuss their collages as a group to reinforce the importance of kindness and appreciation in friendships. Organize a friendship time capsule activity. Have kids bring small items or notes representing their interests and personalities. These can include drawings, favorite quotes, or small trinkets. Seal these items in a container and set a date in the future (e.g., six months or a year) for the group to open the time capsule together, reflecting on how theyve grown as friends. Create a storytelling circle where each child takes turns sharing a memorable friendship moment or a time when they were a good friend to someone. Encourage them to use their creativity and imagination to make the stories engaging. This activity not only strengthens their storytelling skills but also reinforces the value of positive interactions in friendships. Challenge kids to perform random acts of kindness for their peers. Provide a list of kind deeds they can choose from, such as writing an anonymous note of encouragement or helping a friend with a task. Afterward, discuss how these acts of kindness made them feel and their impact on their friendships. Create a Friendship Recipe activity where kids work together to craft a recipe for a great friendship. Provide ingredients like trust, communication, laughter, and empathy. Ask each child to contribute one ingredient and explain why its essential for building strong friendships. Compile their ingredients into a fun and creative Friendship Recipe poster that serves as a reminder of the key elements of friendship. Calling all parents, teachers, and caring counselors! Are you on a mission to teach kids the art of being great friends and forging new friendships? Look no further because weve got a treasure trove of engaging friendship activities just for you! Introducing theFriendship Activities Unit. This friendship SEL curriculum is a fantastic resource bursting with vital topics that teach children how to be top-notch pals. In a world where friendships are central to a childs emotional growth, we believe in arming students with the indispensable tools they need to cultivate and nurture positive relationships. One fun activity to help build relationships is playing board games. Playing games to build friendships is like mixing different ingredients to create a delicious recipe: Lets look at some of the most popular games for building friendships together: Board games offer an enjoyable way for kids to bond. They provide a structured and entertaining environment where kids can work together, laugh, and converse while having a great time.Board games teach fairness and cooperation, making it easier for kids to communicate and get to know each other. Plus, whether we win or not, we all have a good time, making playing board games a great way to build new friendships! Here are some of the most popular co-operative games for younger children: Duck Duck Goose isnt just any game; its a fantastic icebreaker, especially for young kids. It nudges them to step out of their shells and interact in a nonverbal, quirky way. Oh, and expect giggles galore as you chase each other around! Looking for a card game thats all about fostering friendships? Look no further than Go Fish. Perfect for a group of 4 players, this game isnt just about cards; its about learning how to ask simple questions and having a whale of a time while youre at it! Heres a game thats a real chatterboxs delight! The Game of Telephone is all about developing those communication/social skills,andits bound to have everyone in stitches. See how messages can twist and turn as theyre whispered from one ear to another. Just remember, keep it to 6 or fewer players, or things might get seriously scrambled! Have a big bunch of 8 or more kids eager for fantastic fun? Well, look no further! We have a lineup of awesome games thatll bring your large group closer together in no time. Team Building Games: Unite and Conquer! Team building games are the ultimate way to bring together diverse individuals in larger groups. Check out these thrilling activities: Relay races Creating a human pyramid Two truths and a lie Escape room challenge Human knot Building the tallest marshmallow tower out of spaghetti noodle sticks and marshmallows all! The Question Game: Getting to Know You! This game is perfect for a classroom setting with a large group, but it can also work wonders in a small group during a counselors social skills session. Make it as serious or silly as you like! In a circle, students take turns answering a question to get better acquainted. Here are some examples: Serious Questions: Whats your favorite movie? Whats your favorite color? What sports do you like to play? Do you have any siblings? Silly Questions: If you could choose any name, what would it be? Whats the craziest thing youve ever done? Pizza or chicken nuggets every day for life? What makes you laugh uncontrollably? Charades is a classic game where you act out words or phrases without saying a word. Use your body and facial expressions to convey the message while others guess. Its like a silent play, with loads of laughter guaranteed! In Musical Chairs, players walk around a circle of chairs while music plays. When the music stops, its a race to grab a chair. But watch out, there are fewer chairs than players, so someone might be left standing. Its an exciting and friendly competition that adds a burst of energy to any gathering! A scavenger hunt is like an epic treasure hunt game. Its ideal for breaking large groups into smaller teams but perfect for school, home, or birthday parties. With a list of things to find or clues to follow, you and your friends become detectives on an adventure, searching for hidden treasures. Its brain-teasing fun that encourages teamwork and exploration! What about these free Scavenger Hunt games? Or learn more about Scavenger Hunt fun! As children grow older, their self-esteem tends to take a sharp drop. As parents, its heart-breaking to hear children say negative things about themselves. If your child struggles with confidence in themselves, check out theConfidence Kit! Heres a nifty idea to help your kids make friends beyond the classroom encourage them to join an after-school activity like a sport. First off, its a fantastic way for kids to exercise, and second, it provides an opportunity to work with their peers towards a common goal (while doing something they all enjoy together!) If sports arent their jam, no worries! Explore other activities that tickle their fancy. Whether its dance, gymnastics, Lego club, cheerleading, art club, Scouts, or karate, theres an activity for everyone! Eating together is a great way to become friends and learn about each other. Empower your child to strike up conversations during lunch with their seatmate (while enjoying their meal, of course!) Sharing a meal is a wonderful way to foster friendship and learn about each other. Need some conversation starters? How about discussing funny dreams, favorite movies, cracking jokes, sports, pets, delectable foods, recent adventures, beloved animals, board games, TV shows, sweet treats, post-school plans, or even siblings? As a parent, you might not have control over the school day, but you can certainly take matters into your own hands. Arrange playdates at your home, focusing on activities your child adores. Having a game or two ready can ease interaction if they struggle. Birthday parties provide a relaxed setting for kids to mingle and bond outside the classroom. If your child receives an invitation, make every effort to let them attend. And teachers consider encouraging whole-class invitations to ensure no one feels left out. Did you know that your local library hosts numerous free activities for kids to meet and greet? Check their website and explore events that pique your childs interest. You never know who they might befriend in the process! Lets talk about something super important: listening skills. Imagine friendship-building as a quest in your favorite adventure game. To level up, you need to master listening. Being a good listener means giving your friends your full attention when they talk. These are crucial lessons in how to be a good friend! Its like tuning in to a crucial part of the games story. Social cues are like secret codes in your favorite spy movie they help us understand what others feel or need. Pay attention to body language, facial expressions, and tone of voice. Theyre like clues guiding us through the tricky world of friendships. You can get fun social cues and listening lessons in our Heartsmart Curriculum. Through relatable friendship books, kids can learn the qualities of what makes a good friend and how to navigate different relationships. Reading stories about friendship makes the lessons more relatable to young kids because they can see themselves in the characters. It helps them understand that theyre not alone. Think of it like having a wise coach on the sidelines during a game, offering valuable tips and guidance to help you succeed. These stories show kids that theyre not alone in their experiences and provide valuable insights into navigating different relationships. Reading about the adventures and challenges of fictional friends can inspire children to practice empathy, kindness, and effective communication in their own friendships. Our goal here is to understand the concept of friendship safety. Its important to remember that not all friends are alike. Some are trustworthy and kind, like reliable characters in a story, while others may not have good intentions. Our mission is to identify the pals who genuinely care about us, the ones who are respectful and supportive. But we must also be aware of the not-so-great friends who may not always play fair. Think of it as distinguishing between a storys good and not-so-good characters. So, lets get down to business and learn how to recognize the friends who truly have our best interests at heart and those who might not. Here are some signs to watch out for: Unsafe Friends May: Say hurtful things or make fun of you. Try to control your decisions or actions. Disregard your feelings when you talk to them. Pressure you into doing things youre uncomfortable with. Spread rumors or gossip about you. Not be there for you when you need them the most. Stay sharp, friendship experts! Remember this: Building new friendships is like planting seeds in a garden. It takes time, care, and patience. Remember to teach kids to be kind, open, and genuine; youll watch those friendships grow and bloom. Just like a puzzle, each person brings something unique and important to the group. Remind children to embrace the differences and cherish the moments you share together!!!! Having a good friend is hard to find, and being a good friend requires effort and care! Remember, these friendship activities for preschoolers friendship activities for kindergartners friendship activities for elementary kids friendship activities for tweens friendship day activities Facebook Twitter Email Skip to content Start the day with a crafty session where kids make their own friendship bands. You can provide colorful threads, beads, buttons, and charms to let their creativity shine. For a twist, encourage the children to make matching bands with their best friend! Not only does this activity help with precision skills, but it also gives children a sense of achievement as they see their friends wearing their handmade friendship band. Once they are done, they can exchange the bands with a best friend as a gift of their bond. Create a Friendship Wall in the classroom where children can post quotes, drawings, or photos about their friends. This could be a large piece of paper or a cardboard where they can express what makes their friendships special. By the end of the day, the wall will be a colorful collage of kind words and happy memories that everyone can enjoy. Large paper or bulletin board Markers, crayons, and pens Sticky notes or small pieces of paper Good friends make the good times better and the hard times easier. This simple and fun activity involves kids making bookmarks for their friends. You can provide cardstock or colored paper, along with stickers, markers, and glitter. The students can design bookmarks that reflect their friendship, adding a personal touch by writing a small note or drawing something meaningful. After theyre done, they can swap bookmarks with a friend. These bookmarks will remind them of their friendship every time they open a book. Friendship Circle Time is a great way to inspire kindness and respect among kids. Gather the children in a circle, and let each one share something they like or admire about the person sitting next to them. This activity fosters a positive atmosphere and helps children recognize the good qualities and habits in their friends. Its a wonderful way to start the day with positivity. The Friendship Tree is a fantastic visual representation of how friendships help us grow. Cut out leaf shapes from colored paper and ask each student to write the name of a friend and something they admire about them on a leaf. As the day progresses, the tree will grow with kind words and friendly messages. This tree can stay up for the rest of the week as a reminder of the special bonds in the class. Colored paper (green, brown) Scissors and glue Markers A scavenger hunt is a fun way to get a little moving and thinking about friendship. Create a list of items related to friends that children need to find around the classroom or school. These could include items like a picture of two people holding hands, a heart-shaped object, or a word like trust or kindness written somewhere. The team that locates all the items first will receive a prize. A list of friendship-themed items to find Small prizes for the winners End the day with a Friendship Dance Party! Play some upbeat, kid-friendly music and let the students dance with their friends. You can even teach them simple dance steps that they can perform together. Its a great way to burn off some energy and celebrate the fun and joy of Friendship Day. Motivate them to dance with different friends to celebrate the diversity of friendships in the classroom. Just like Friendship Day, other seasonal celebrations like monsoon crafts can also bring students together. If youre looking for more creative ideas, check out our blog on Monsoon Activities and Crafts for School Students. Friendship Day is more than just a celebration; its a chance to build strong, supportive relationships that can last a lifetime. With these fun and engaging activities, were not just making the day special; were teaching kids about kindness, loyalty, and understanding. As they laugh, create, and share with their friends, theyre learning how to be better friends and better people. Lets make this Friendship Day unforgettable, filled with joy, laughter, and a deeper appreciation for the amazing bonds we share. Frequently Asked Questions Q1. A fairly long-lived July Atlantic hurricane, Claudette began as a tropical wave in the eastern Caribbean. It moved westward past the Yucatan Peninsula before moving northwestward through the Gulf of Mexico. Claudette remained a tropical storm until just before making landfall in Port O'Connor, Texas, on July15, when it quickly strengthened to a strong Category1 hurricane. Forecasting its path and intensity was uncertain, resulting in widespread and often unnecessary preparations. Claudette caused one death and moderate damage in Texas, mostly from strong winds, as well as extensive beach erosion. Because of the damage, President George W. Bush declared portions of South Texas as a Federal Disaster Area. Claudette also caused significant rainfall and minor damage in the Mexican state of Quintana Roo, as well as minor damage on Saint Lucia.
