Image via Jaromir Chalabala/Shutterstock By Jennifer Coates, DVM The pancreas is not an organ that many pet parents have reason to think about—that is, until something goes wrong with it. Pancreatitis is the most common disease of the pancreas in dogs. Let’s investigate the causes and symptoms of pancreatitis in dogs and what can be done to prevent and treat this serious condition, including the role that a low-fat dog food can play. Causes of Pancreatitis in Dogs Dogs can develop pancreatitis for a number of reasons, including: Eating something with a high fat content, particularly if it is not part of their regular diet Being overweight Pancreatic infections Having other medical conditions like Cushing’s disease, diabetes mellitus or abnormally high levels of fat in the blood Exposure to some types of medications or toxins, including organophosphates, L-asparaginase, azathioprine, corticosteroids, sulphonamides, potassium bromide, phenobarbital and zinc Abdominal trauma that affects the pancreas A genetic or breed predisposition (Miniature Schnauzers, Yorkshire Terriers, Silky Terriers, Miniature Poodles) A history of pancreatitis In many cases, no specific underlying cause can be identified. Symptoms of Pancreatitis in Dogs The pancreas has several functions in the body, one of which is making digestive enzymes. In good health, these enzymes remain inactive until they are secreted into the intestinal tract in response to a recent meal. While the exact mechanisms are unclear, pancreatitis develops when these digestive enzymes start working prematurely, while they are still within the pancreas, leading to pancreatic inflammation and sometimes infection and/or tissue death. Pancreatitis may be mild or severe. It can develop suddenly or over a long period of time. It may happen once or become a recurrent or chronic problem. All of this explains why the symptoms of pancreatitis in dogs can vary tremendously. Dogs with pancreatitis typically have some combination of the following symptoms: Lethargy Abdominal discomfort/pain Poor appetite Vomiting Diarrhea Abdominal enlargement Fever None of these symptoms are specific for pancreatitis in dogs. To make a definitive diagnosis, a veterinarian will have to run some tests, starting with a blood chemistry panel, complete blood cell count, fecal examination, urinalysis and possibly some abdominal X-rays to rule out other diseases that cause similar symptoms. This initial workup may point to pancreatitis, but additional testing (e.g., cPLI or SPEC-CPL blood tests) is usually also necessary. Sometimes abdominal ultrasounds, exploratory surgery or other diagnostic procedures are needed to reach a definitive diagnosis of pancreatitis in dogs. Treatment for Pancreatitis in Dogs Treatment for pancreatitis will depend on a dog’s symptoms and any abnormalities that were detected on his blood work and urinalysis. The goal is to keep the patient comfortable and support his physiological needs while giving the pancreas time to heal. Fluid therapy and dog medications to control nausea and pain are often necessary. Your veterinarian may prescribe dog antibiotics to treat or prevent infection. Severely affected dogs may need to be hospitalized for an extended period of time and require more aggressive treatment with feeding tubes, plasma transfusion or surgery. Research has found that dogs with pancreatitis who quickly start eating dog food again have an improved prognosis. Therefore, veterinarians aggressively use anti-nausea drugs to treat vomiting in attempt to get food into dogs with pancreatitis as soon as possible. Dog Food for Pancreatitis Most veterinarians recommend that dogs eat a highly digestible, low-fat dog food as they are recovering from pancreatitis. Dietary fat is thought to be a major stimulus for the pancreas to secrete digestive enzymes, which may worsen pancreatic inflammation. A low-fat dog food can promote pancreatic healing while still providing all the nutrition dogs need to heal. If your dog has a history of repeated bouts of pancreatitis, your veterinarian may recommend that you continue to feed a low-fat dog food to prevent flare-ups. Several well-respected pet food companies make dog food formulas that are specifically designed to help dogs recover from pancreatitis. Hill’s dog foods include Hill’s Prescription Diet 1/d Low Fat Canned Dog Food and Hill’s Prescription Diet 1/d Low Fat Dry Dog Food, both of which are supplemented with omega-3 fatty acids that have been shown to reduce inflammation. Royal Canin Veterinary Diet Gastrointestinal Low Fat Canned Dog Food and Royal Canin Veterinary Diet Gastrointestinal Low Fat Dry Dog Food also contain omega-3 fatty acids and have the least amount of fat of any canned and dry dog foods currently on the market. Purina Pro Plan Veterinary Diets EN Gastroenteric Formula Canned Dog Food and Purina Pro Plan Veterinary Diets EN Gastroenteric Formula Dry Dog Food have higher fat contents than either the Hill’s dog foods or Royal Canin veterinary diets mentioned above, but may be an option for dogs who don’t benefit from strict fat reduction. Talk to your veterinarian for help in picking the best dog food for pancreatitis based on the specifics of your dog’s case. Welcome To The Development Science And Nutritional Balancing Website PO BOX 54, PRESCOTT, AZ 86302-0054, USA - page updated 10/16/21 Development, as we use the word, is the expansion of the human energy field. It is a life path that results in deep healing of the body and mind. Development is programmed into our DNA. However, it rarely occurs due to malnutrition, lifestyle imbalances, and excessive toxic metals in the body. This website offers programs to promote rapid development. Nutritional balancing is a term we formerly used to describe the healing work. It is not as accurate as the word development because this healing method goes well beyond nutrition. We also teach Biblical values, which are needed to establish and maintain any free society. We are a nutritional, developmental, medical and veterinary research foundation. DIETARY ESSENTIALS FOR DEVELOPMENT With each meal, fill 2/3 of your plate with cooked, preferred vegetables including four types of onions, carrot, a very small thin slice of ginger root, green beans, Brussels sprouts, daikon or white radish, a tiny piece of celery, red cabbage, and a tiny thin slice of horseradish root.
